IRAQ DENIES ISRAELI CHARGES OF TERROR

Charges that the Government of Iraq was organizing a "reign of terror" against its 150,000 Jewish subjects were categorically denied by Dr. Fadhil Jamali, Iraq's delegate to the United Nations, in a statement issued at Lake Success, N.Y.

At the same time Israeli delegation sources declared that they were "studying the possibility" of laying their case before the United Nations as an alleged violation of fundamental rights guaranteed in the Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Israel is awaiting a "suitable opportunity" to indict the Iraqi Government before some unit of the General Assembly, according to a delegation spokesman, reports the New York Times.

Replying to the Israeli allegations, Iraq charged the Tel Aviv Government with having sought to divert world attention from "Jewish invasion, aggression and disregard for United Nations decisions" that have "led to the miseries of a million Arabs in Palestine."

The Iraqi authorities have maintained martial law in their country for the purpose of protecting the large Jewish minority from violence at the hands of the Arab population, which is enraged over the "very aggressive and inhuman policies of the Zionists in Palestine," Dr. Jamali asserted.

"There have been no recent Jewish arrests of any sort in Iraq and the Jews of Iraq enjoy complete freedom and privileges in the country," the statement continued, adding that "the Government of Iraq is most careful and conscientious to see that there is no discrimination made against any elements in Iraq, be whatever race or creed they [illegible] accused "Zionist [illegible] in enforcing order and justice to all elements of the population, irrespective of race, colour or religion."

Reports of a pogrom in Iraq, which the Israeli Government said it had confirmed, coincide with a reported offer by Iraq to exchange 100,000 Iraqi Jews for a similar number of Palestinian refugees.

The Government announcement said that the persecution in Iraq had been "accompanied by acts of brutality and cruelty," and added that since the State of Israel had been established, the Jews of Iraq had been the victims of a barbarous regime's racial persecution.

"To the general discrimination long suffered by the Jews of Iraq have now been added new acts of terror, including detention in concentration camps, confiscation of property and staged trials," the announcement said.

A Government spokesman said that some of these Jews whose lives and possessions had been jeopardized had tried to escape to Israel. As a result of this, he said, "the full vengeance of the Iraqi authorities was unleashed against them."

"A new wave of persecutions began three weeks ago," the spokesman declared. "On the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur), October 7, police invaded the sanctity of a synagogue at Amara, south of Baghdad, and arrested ten of the worshippers, among them the chairman of the community council. Those arrested were not informed of the charges against them. Three days later, five Jews were arrested in Baghdad and their houses ransacked.

"The next day it was discovered that they were being tortured in order to wring from them confessions that they belonged to the Zionist movement and to the organization responsible for arranging the escape of Jews from Iraq. Additional searches were carried out in Baghdad on October 12 and scores of arrests made. These new detainees were also subjected to torture. Since then searches, arrests and torture continue on an ever increasing scale. Police have also broken into schools, and teachers and pupils have been arrested.

"Latest reports show that more than 100 among the newly arrested have been sent to Abu Grib camp, south of Baghdad, and some seventy others have been held for investigation. The detainees include parents of people who are alleged

Says Drives On Bias Do Harm

Arthur Garfield Hays, general counsel of the American Civil Liberties Union, asserted in New York that laws and organizations seeking to curb the growth of anti-Semitism and [illegible] its expression [illegible] the New York Chapter of the American Council for Judaism at Town Hall, 123 West Forty-third Street, Mr. Hays named the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith and the Zionist Organization of America as organizations doing harm, reports the New York Herald Tribune. He said he favored a fair employment practices act which would operate through persuasion and publicity, rather than compulsion on employers to hire persons they do not want.

"I expect to be villified for my statements," Mr. Hays said. "That is another objection I have to these organizations. They villify people who dare say anything about intolerance different from the organization viewpoint. Their purposes are laudable, but I disagree with their methods."

Mr. Hays asserted that prejudice was a natural thing, and he urged Americans to combat it not as Jews or Negroes but on all fronts at the same time. "A fight against a specific prejudice," he said, "gives an undue preponderance to that one prejudice. We are fortunate that in the United States people have different kinds of groups."

Urges Church To War On Anti-Semitism

The Conference on the Church and the Jewish People called on Protestant churches to denounce anti-Semitism, and recommended that Jews be included in evangelistic work of Christian missions and parishes. The findings of the conference were based on two days of discussion sponsored by the American Committee on the Christian Approach to Jews. The meetings were held at 156 Fifth Avenue, in New York.

Branding anti-Semitism as a sign against God and man, the findings committee of the conference asked that a campaign be led against it, "no matter what its origin." The program was declared to be made urgent by "evidences of an alarming increase of anti-Semitism in America."

Outlining evangelism among Jews here and abroad, the conference cautioned churches against insisting that the Jew sever all identity with his people and culture. Plans for the establishment of a Christian Institute on Jewish Studies for clergy and laymen and the preparation of literature for Jews and Christians preaching to them were listed in the program.

At a forum on Israel and Zionism Rabbi Elmer Bergen, of the American Council for Judaism, accused Zionists of trying to draw American Jews into a nationalist movement serving Israeli interests. He asked Mrs. Moses Epstein, former president of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, if the first loyalty of an American Jew was to the United States or Israel, reports the New York Times.

"There is no question of where his first loyalty is," Mrs. Epstein replied emphatically. "And that is [illegible] of the Zionist movement was to establish a home for the homeless and that the creation of a state was a means to that end.

Aubrey Eban, Israeli delegate to the United Nations, restated the offer of the Israeli Government to repatriate and resettle 100,000 Arab refugees. He also explained the Israeli compromise plan for a United Nations agency to supervise the religious part of Jerusalem and leave the secular life of the city to Israel.

The Rev. Daniel G. Finestone, of Philadelphia; and the Rev. Harold Floreen, of the National Lutheran Council of Chicago, presented methods used by Presbyterian and Lutheran parishes and missions to draw Jews into the Christian church.

To Admit "Hard Core" But Not Now

Israel will offer a home to all remaining Jewish displaced persons in the "hard core" of the injured, sick, blind and aged, Shalom Adler-Rudel, a spokesman for the Israeli Government, told the International Refugee Organization, at Geneva.

Expressing regret that the Israeli Government could not take all these persons immediately because of overtaxed reception facilities, the spokesman said that the Israeli Government was determined that eventually no Jewish displaced person should be left in Germany or Austria merely because of physical handicaps. "These are the remnants of Dachau, Belsen," Mr. Adler-Rudel said.

Israel has already accepted 11,000 families, of whom one or more members suffered from handicaps. She accepts tubercular cases, neurotics and the limbless—all types of cases that among non-Jewish displaced persons are relegated to the so-called hard core for whom no future is visible except being dumped on German economy when the International Refugee Organization terminates. Apart from Norway, no country has made a significant gesture toward helping non-Jewish hard core cases. It is believed that there are about 5,000 Jewish and 45,000 non-Jewish cases in this category.

Eric Millhouse, president of the Australian returned service men's organization, which is comparable to the American Legion, told the organization's general council that he had two colleagues, who recently completed a 1,200-mile tour of IRO camps, and who were convinced that displaced persons going to Australia would make good citizens.

U.S. Student Groups Aid DP To Study

Two hundred students from Eastern Europe have been brought to America under the Displaced Persons Act and enrolled, expenses paid, in colleges and universities under a project initiated by the nation's student groups. The foreign students, many of whom come from Soviet-occupied countries, will be eligible for United States citizenship.

Ninety leading American institutions are cooperating by waiving tuition or providing financial assistance to the DP students. The project is being handled by the National Coordinating Council, 20 West Fortieth Street, organized by the student groups under auspices of the World Students Service Fund.

The cash value of the project to date is $200,000, it was said by Miss Muriel Jacobson, director of the Council. Additional funds are being sought, she said, so that "double or triple" the number of students could be brought to the U.S. next year.

The majority of the DP students have entered the junior and senior classes and a few are doing graduate work. The average age is twenty-four. They are housed in dormitories or in fraternity and sorority houses as guests of the students and are provided with part-time jobs, individual coaching and in some cases with pocket money.

Among the colleges and universities that have accepted foreign students are Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Radcliffe, Smith, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke, Bucknell, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Cornell, Columbia, Rutgers, Swarthmore, Ohio State, Louisiana State, Stanford [illegible] Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

The program was made possible by a special interpretation last year of the Displaced Persons Act which considered college enrollment as equivalent to employment.

Participating in the project are the National Student Association, the Hillel Foundation, the Newman Club Federation, the National Federation of Catholic College Students, the United Students Christian Council, which includes the YMCA and YWCA, the Masaryk Trust, the Institute of International Education, the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students and other student organizations.

Claims Iraq Seized 350 Jews

A 35-year-old Jewish merchant who said he had fled Baghdad told a Government-sponsored press conference at Tel Aviv about what he described as a wave of anti-Jewish terror in Iraq.

He charged that the campaign had begun October 3, the Day of Atonement. From then until he escaped a week or so, he said, 350 Jews had been arrested arbitrarily. The merchant alleged that 70 per cent of them had been "tortured." He said many were in camps thirty miles from Baghdad. In most cases, he added, their property was confiscated and they no longer were in communication with their families or relatives.

He declared that in one day the Government had dismissed 370 Jews from posts in railroad, telegraph and postal services and that many had been sent to camps for "screening."

The merchant said he had abandoned his shop and all his possessions after his partner had been arrested for possessing a letter from Israel. He said that while he himself was being interrogated by the police he had overheard cries from adjacent rooms and had seen "people being led from one room to another, some of them apparently bleeding and all of them on the point of hysteria." He added: "I heard one of them cry just a few minutes before, 'Don't burn me, I'll tell!'"

The merchant said he, himself, had not been ill treated. He said that before he had left Baghdad bodies of four persons who had been "detained" had been handed over to the Jewish community committee. This committee, he declared, had been reduced to impotence and four Jewish members of Parliament had been told to keep away from parliamentary meetings un-

20,000 Gather In U.S. Town Of 400, Founded By Jew, To Mark 150 Years Of Tolerance

Sitting and standing in a natural amphitheater decorated in [illegible] autumn colors, a crowd [illegible] than 20,000 persons listened at Aaronsburg, Pa., as internationally known speakers voiced pleas for racial and religious tolerance throughout the world.

The entire program was presented by the Commonwealth as a part of "Pennsylvania Week." Organizations which assisted were the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, and Pennsylvania State College.

During the afternoon they witnessed a pageant, with a cast of 1,000 residents of the tiny town and the surrounding area, on the same theme. The occasion was the 150th anniversary of the Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church, built upon land given by Aaron Levy, a Jew.

Governor James H. Duff, who told the audience that "the tradition of Pennsylvania has been the tradition of understanding," declared that he would issue a proclamation setting aside the anniversary in the future as "Tolerance Day." He said he hoped this might become a national observance. It was learned that an effort will be made to have the United Nations take cognizance of the event and give approval to an annual "Tolerance Day" observance in all member nations, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Aaron Levy, a wealthy merchant of Revolutionary days, founded this town which is situated in the geographical center of the state, twenty-five miles from State College. He hoped that it would become the capital, but Commonwealth authorities of the time did not agree. Today it has a population of only 400. There are no Jewish families living there and only a few Catholics.

Speakers were: Justice Felix Frankfurter, of the United States Supreme Court; Dr. Ralph J. Buncha, former U. N. mediator for Palestine; Major General William J. Donovan, former director of the Office of Strategic Services, and Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of "The Christian Herald."

Justice Frankfurter said: "That (the American) heritage is always endangered by inertia and complacency, by timidity and reluctance to keep abreast of the needs of a progressive society."

Dr. Buncha asserted "It is not the atomic bomb that we must fear, it is in man's perversity that the danger lies. . . . It is peoples with which the United Nations is concerned, because we realize that the problem is imperfect relations among peoples."

General Donovan said: "The cold war is a war of subversion . . . we have ignored our spiritual defenses."

Dr. Poling added: "The road of intolerance leads only to disaster."

The program began with a religious service on a hillside below the old church. It was to have been held in the church, which seats 200, but officials decided to move it outdoors when thousands of persons jammed the area.

Europe's Jews Are In Good Health Now

Dr. William M. Schmidt, overseas medical director of the Joint Distribution Committee, a major American agency for aiding distressed Jews overseas, which receives its funds from the United Jewish Appeal, in a report to U.J.A. officials made public in New York, said that more than 1,000,000 Jews in Europe had been restored to health as a result of the program.

Describing "a basic improvement" in the health of those Jews who survived concentration camps, Dr. Schmidt said the rate of communicable disease has dropped sharply and malnutrition is almost non-existent.

Dr. Schmidt returned recently to the United States after three and a half years abroad. He has been appointed Associate Professor of Public Health at Harvard University Medical School.

A survey by the Relief Ind Organ in 1946, Dr. Schmidt said, showed that four of every 100 Jews in displaced persons camps in Germany and Austria had tuberculosis. Today the number has dropped 1.3 in a 100, a rate approaching normal.

The decline in malnutrition cases, Dr. Schmidt said, is even more dramatic. Immediately after their liberation in 1945, the 1,400,000 Jewish survivors of slave-labor and concentration camps were "half-starved wrecks" with thousands requiring hospitalization, he said. Today the number of undernourished Jews in Europe has dropped to less than 2 per cent.

MIZRACHI HEAD GOES TO POST IN ISRAEL

Tribute to Leon Gellman, retiring president of the Mizrachi Organization of America, for his "high achievements in the advancement of religious Zionism on the American scene" was paid by 500 persons at a dinner at the Woodstock Hotel, in New York. Mr. Gellman left for Israel to assume the chairmanship of the executive committee of the World Mizrachi Organization.

In a scroll presented to him in behalf of the Mizrachi national organization, it was stated that "the elevation of the president of American Mizrachi to the highest post in the Mizrachi World Organization is regarded as a tribute to the American organization no less than to the electee himself." Mr. Gellman, the scroll pointed out, "raised the standards of the organization as he strengthened its structure and secured its foundations."

Food Parcels Held Up Despite Need

Although the Israeli Government has signed a contract with the Cooperative for American Remittances for Europe permitting food packages to be received tax free, it has so far withheld official cooperation, with the result that there are 18,000 packages now collecting dust in local warehouses. CARE officials at Tel Aviv have neither the telephone nor transportation facilities that were promised them when the contract was signed, according to the New York Times.

It had been hoped the Government would give official recognition to the organization to inspire those abroad who might wish to make a contribution to friends or relatives in Israel. It is obvious that neither the Government nor the Jewish Agency wishes to encourage any organization that would in any way compete with existing food-distributing groups or the United Jewish Appeal.

But the fact remains that there are thousands of persons who need food packages and especially baby food. Milk is rationed below the level some doctors believe necessary for the health of infants.

MARRIAGES

GROSSMAN-CRAFT

The marriage of Miss Thelma Craft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Craft, Rockland Avenue, to William Grossman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Grossman, Cedar Crescent, took place on Sunday, September 18, in Adath Israel Synagogue, Rabbi Charles Bender officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a cocktail-length dress of periwinkle-blue satin, fashioned with a Peter Pan collar, long sleeves ending in points, tiny buttons down the bodice to the waistline, and a full, circular skirt. Her headdress was of matching blue satin, with pale pink ostrich feathers and a veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a bouquet of pale pink roses and baby's breath. Miss Marilyn Craft, sister of the bride, was maid of honour, wearing a bottle-green crepe dress, trimmed with beading, a satin and felt hat to match, and a corsage of yellow roses. The best man was Fred Craft, brother of the bride. At the reception which took place in the Ritz Carlton Hotel, the bride's mother wore a black and pink crepe dress, trimmed with beading, a black felt hat, trimmed with pink feathers, and a corsage of white gardenias; the groom's mother wearing an original model black crepe, a black felt hat, and corsage of white gardenias. Centerpieces of white roses were on the tables. For the wedding trip to Atlantic City, N.J., Washington, D.C., and New York, the bride travelled in a grey flannel suit, grey felt hat trimmed with feathers, and pink and navy-blue accessories. The couple are residing on St. Catherine Road.

When Parents Are Partners

By Howard Adelstein, Executive Director, And Judith Coler, Adult Activities Director, Of Bridgeport, Conn., Jewish Community Center

For several years attempts had been made to encourage parent interest and participation in the program of the day camp, but with little success. In the summer of 1947, however, inspired by stimulating discussions at parents' meetings, several mothers suggested that a parent education program be developed in the winter. The idea was well received by the group and a committee of volunteers was named to plan a program.

A series of five lectures on child care was arranged, under leadership of a recognized expert, and seventy-five mothers attended these afternoon sessions. In order that their husbands might also share in these discussions, the final session was held at night and twenty-five fathers joined the group. The topics considered were these: "The parents' philosophy and attitudes toward child training," "Leisure time activities for children," "Children's basic emotional needs" (two sessions) and "Discipline and self-control." Interest was high, and at the final meeting the suggestion was approved that a permanent parents group be organized, to include all parents, not only those of the day camp children. A committee of twenty volunteered to work out detailed plans, They recognized two possible objectives for the group:

1—Parent education, in the form of lectures, discussion and study groups, and

2—Cooperation with the Center in behalf of the children through a children's activity committee, a day camp committee, and a fathers' group to assist in building day camp equipment in the Center workshop.

After considerable discussion of various approaches to implementing the established goals, the committee filled in the details for the education program, listing suggestions for subjects and sources for speakers. A mailing list was compiled of parents of children under fourteen years of age. They felt it was wise to begin with this age group and expand at a later date to include parents of teen-agers.

Open monthly meetings for all interested parents were planned and the first session was held in March, 1948 on the subject, "Bringing up Jewish Children in a non-Jewish society." Invitations were sent to approximately six hundred, and follow-up telephone calls were made. One hundred and fifty attended this opening meeting, and at a brief business session formally established the Parents Group. Officers were elected and resolutions covering membership, purposes, dues and functions were adopted. Twenty-two couples enrolled immediately at a fee of $2 per couple. Membership in the Center was not made an essential to membership in the group at this point.

The discussion of the subject of the meeting turned out to be frustrating because of the inability of a group of that size to come to grips with the fundamentals of the problem. As a result the planning committee felt impelled to schedule another session on the same topic. The second time it was handled by a panel of four discussants: a rabbi, school principal of Jewish faith, the director of the Jewish Community Council, and an educator. A member of the group served as moderator. Case records which illustrated reactions of Jewish children toward others of different background and toward anti-Semitic expressions were used as a focus for discussion by the panel. Participation was lively because of the highly controversial comments of the panel members.

The topic for May was "Summer activity for children", and an exhibit of handicrafts and hobbies was held, along with the tools and materials needed for each medium. The June meeting covered "Music for children," as well as an exhibit of books on the subject, musical instruments and children's records.

In September, meetings were resumed with a discussion on "Sex education for children." Keen interest was evidenced and there was excellent reaction to the speaker's approach. A display of books and pamphlets was again included. Subsequent meetings covered "Books for children" and "Public education in Bridgeport and surrounding communities." At the latter session a report was presented by a committee of the group on a comparative study of conditions in local schools. Attendance at this meeting included members of all school boards, teachers, principals, Chamber of Commerce Education Committee and others. Interest in the Parents Group grew steadily and by December one hundred fifty-five families were enrolled as members, with over seventy-five active on various committees.

During the summer months committees met frequently to plan the fall and winter program which was to include several special projects. The first was a discussion group of special problems of Jewish children. Several sessions were spent in considering attitudes and problems they had personally encountered. The group sought answers to such questions as: "What can be done to help Jewish children accept knowledge of their differences from other children?" and "How can a child be given an understanding and appreciation of the Jewish traditions?"

This led to planned festival celebrations in which the parents would participate. These were intended to serve as guides for observing the festivals at home. Hanukah was the first occasion celebrated. The program consisted of a Hanukah playlet, dreidel games, folk dancing and refreshments. Mimeographed souvenir booklets containing helpful information for home observance of the holiday were sold. Exhibits of party favors, decorations and reading lists were held; and menorahs, books and gifts were displayed for sale. Similar projects were planned for Purim and Passover.

Another group set about exploring the possibility of setting up a progressive nursery school at the Center. They encountered many problems related to staff and finances, but decided to start on a modest basis with a three-day-a-week nursery play group. Twelve children were enrolled and a teacher and assistant hired. The project developed with much success. As a result of careful evaluation, the play group will probably be expanded in the future. A serious concern for the highest standards of nursery school education has emerged from this experience.

A third group was organized as the Children's Activity Committee, to advise and consult with the Center Board and staff on children's programs at the Center. The earnest efforts of the committee resulted in increased standards of staffing the department, enlarged budget for leaders, introduction of new activities, and tripled attendance.

A fourth project was an institute for parents of pre-school children. This was a rather intensive study of needs and growth patterns of this age group. Individual consultations were made possible on a limited basis following the sessions. A similar institute is being organized to consider age needs and interests of children five to ten.

Some important factors which contributed to the success of this program are these: 1) Strong leadership and high cultural background of many of the members; sincere, conscientious men and women ready to give unlimited effort in furthering the work. 2) Wide participation in all of the planning, rotation of members on program and other committees, willingness to follow through on any action recommended at meetings. (This was particularly true at the session on public education, when the committee was authorized to join actively with other organizations to encourage improvement of educational standards in the public schools.) 3) Staff leadership, active assistance given to committees and officers. 4) Quality of the programs, thoughtful selection of topics and competant speakers.

Some interesting by-products have come about as a result of the work of the Parents Group. Several members were elected to the Board; the group shared actively in the Center's membership drive, canvassing parents of children in the program; it succeeded in raising standards of programming; and it helped influence the development of a Center camp site for day camping and overnight camping. Furthermore, the Center gained prominence in the community for its work in parent education and children's programming. It has been called upon to provide leadership in projects of the Council of Social Agencies related to parent education and children's activity. Also, radio programs on parent education, sponsored by the Community Chest, have centered around the progress of this group.

Better balanced meals and greater variety usually result when meals are planned days or weeks in advance, nutritionists say. And advance planning saves times and energy when shopping. Nutrition experts suggest that the basic requirements of Canada's food rules, milk, fruit, vegetables, cereals and meat, should top the shopping list.

HEINZ Vegetarian BEANS...

BEST SELLER IN EVERY JEWISH NEIGHBORHOOD!

To exalt lowly beans to the status of best seller, the Heinz rule is—bake 'em and drench 'em! The baking is done in hot, dry ovens till the skins are brown and crisp. Then comes the drenching! The thirsty beans fairly drink up their rich, tempting tomato sauce. The result is a dish, which heralds good eating by its very aroma. Heinz pareve Vegetarian Beans are a boon to the busy housewife and the hungry family.

CLASS IN COOKERY

one and one-half pounds minced steak
one grated potato
one grated onion
one teaspoon cream of wheat
two eggs
seasoning
garlic (optional)
one slice dry white bread, soaked in water

Brown an onion in fat in loaf tin in which meat loaf is to be baked. Add several tablespoons of boiling water before loaf is put in, to make a gravy. Cut in all ingredients except egg-whites into meat with a fork, so that meat loaf will be fluffy. Beat egg-whites with fork or beater and add at the last. Cover and bake in a 350-degree oven for about one and one-half hours. After loaf has baked for one hour, spread very thinly-sliced onions on top, add salt, pepper and paprika to taste, cover, and bake for another half an hour.

Mrs. S. Cohen,
4640 Grand Boulevard, Montreal.

DILL PICKLES

one six-quart basket small cucumbers three measured ounces salt six large cloves garlic
one ounce mixed pickling spices
one bunch fresh dill

The following recipe is excellent to keep on file: Use three-gallon stone crock, and scatter a little spice at the bottom. Wash cucumbers in cold water, then place one layer of them at bottom of crock. Cut up garlic finely, and spread small amount over cucumbers. Break off one piece of dill and place on cucumbers and garlic. Use another layer flat on top of first, and spread spices, more garlic, and dill, and repeat until all cucumbers and spices are used. It is important to pack cucumbers in tightly so they will not float. Fill pitcher with cold water and pour in one ounce of salt. Allow to dissolve, then stir and pour on cucumbers, and repeat until all salt is used and cucumbers entirely covered with salt-water. Place heavy bowl on top, upside down, to keep cucumbers packed. Cover bowl and crock with wax paper and let stand from three to five days, depending on size, without moving crock until fermented. Keep in cool dry place and avoid sunlight.

Says Status Of Women In Israel Is Inferior

The women of Israel are engaged in a concerted effort to end the social, legal and economic discrimination against them which has given them a status inferior to that of man, Mrs. Israel Goldstein, president of Pioneer Women, the women's Labor Zionist Organization of America, asserted in New York when she returned from Israel with her husband, Rabbi Israel Goldstein, former treasurer of the Jewish Agency for Palestine and now a member of the American section of the agency.

Mrs. Goldstein, slender and smartly clad in a simple blue silk dress, and wearing a silver medallion of the Israeli Order of Working Mothers, outlined the grievances which women in Israel are trying to correct. All of them stem from the traditional inferior role which women play in Oriental countries whence many Israelis came, and from the secondary status which extreme orthodox Jewry assigns to women.

In Israel, where marriage and divorce is solely in Rabbinic hands, women may not enter Rabbinic courts to seek divorce except in unusual circumstances, whereas men may at any time seek divorce.

Traditionally, property in Israel is owned by husbands rather than jointly with their wives, and fathers rather than mothers have custody of and responsibility for children. In many industries, Mrs. Goldstein asserted, women do not get equal pay for equal work, although much of this is being remedied through Histadrut, the Israeli federation of labor. Housewives without children do not get the same medical care from the state as do women who work.

The Council of Working Women met recently in Israel and went on record for changing all these conditions and also for elimination of the stigma from illegitimacy, and for a ban on the marriages of girls younger than seventeen.

On the positive side, Mrs. Goldstein asserted, is the fact that women are increasingly active in politics and industry. Of the 120 members of the Knesset (Parliament), twelve are women, and all political parties but one included women on their slates in the last election.

Although the number of women in the Israeli parliament compares favorably with that in other democratic countries, Mrs. Goldstein asserted that Israeli women want representatives in proportion to their numbers. Pioneer Women, she said, is now engaged in a campaign to raise $1,000,000 to explain the views of Israeli women in the United States and to assist in accomplishing the organization's objectives.

ORDERS VETERANS TO AVOID DISORDER

The Jewish War Veterans directed units throughout the U. S. to apply the "quarantine treatment" to all public appearances of "Communists, Fascists and other subversive elements."

Myer Dorfman, of St. Paul, Minn., national commander of the organization, said the order was issued as a result of the Peekskill incidents and because "Paul Robeson and his sponsors have announced they are planning a series of meetings throughout the country." The order, issued as a national policy of the Jewish War Veterans, said:

"All units are prohibited from initiating or participating in any public demonstration which poses a potential consequence of riot or public disorder. The quarantine or silent treatment is the approved national policy."

The order permits any unit to request permission from a three-man national policy committee for picketing or public demonstrations. In addition, all units may initiate or participate in public meetings that involve no threat of disorder.

Israel Seeks Close Relations With Canada, Says Envoy To U.S.

Eliahu Elath, Israeli Ambassador to the United States, was in Ottawa for the presentation of a cheque for $75,000 to Justice I. C. Rand, of the Supreme Court, from the Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University for the establishment of a chair of jurisprudence at the institution, in the name of the judge. Mr. Elath held a press conference at the Windsor Hotel, in Montreal, and was tendered a luncheon there by the Israeli Consulate of which the Consul-General is Avraham Harman and the Consul is Arie Ben Tovim.

Mr. Elath said that unless the Arab states agreed to direct negotiation with Israel little could be expected from the methods of the Palestine Conciliation Commission. Israel, he said, had made constructive proposals towards the solution of problems arising from the recent war, but the Arabs had contented themselves with unrealistic suggestions and bellicose propaganda calling for revenge.

Mr. Elath said his country wanted to establish "as close relations as possible" with Canada. He said that no direct discussions about relations on the ministerial level had been opened between the two countries but Israel "has it in mind." Israeli representation abroad now consists of one embassy, 12 legations and a number of consulates. Representation in Canada consists of a consulate-general in Montreal. Canadians like Mr. Justice Rand who served on the United Nations Palestine Commission were held in high regard by Israel because of their part in the foundation of the new state, the Ambassador said. Mr. Elath said that Israel has good cause to appreciate the ever-growing part Canada is playing in all international questions. He mentioned External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson as another good friend of the new state.

He said his government was particularly interested in developing commercial relations with Canada.

"Israel has been for many years an important consumer of such Canadian goods as wheat, timber, meat, apples and industrial products. We, on our part, can offer some products to your country, although on a much smaller scale. We hope that we shall soon have the opportunity to organize trade relations between our two countries in a mutually beneficial way."

Israel was now concentrating on production of pharmaceuticals, chemicals, plastics and precision instruments and was interested in sending students to some Canadian universities, he said.

The ambassador said 320,000 immigrants have found their way into Israel since the proclamation of statehood. Of these, he said, more than 200,000 had been completely absorbed into the economic life of the country, 90,000 were still in transient camps — primarily because of lack of housing — and some 55,000 had found their way into agriculture. Farm settlements had increased from 350 to 500 and many new industries had been established.

Foreign capital and skills were entering Israel, compulsory education up to the age of 16 had been introduced and 56 nations had recognized the new state.

Mr. Elath said Israel was devoted to the preservation of peace in the Middle East and development of the area. He said his government had made comprehensive proposals toward the settlement of problems arising from the Jewish-Arab war and had offered to repatriate 100,000 Arab refugees. However, he said, this offer had elicited no similar proposals from the Arab states, which would benefit most by bringing into their under-developed areas the remainder of the refugees.

Instead, he said, Arab leaders had called for revenge, made unrealistic proposals and were now calling for a "second round" in the war. The weakest of the Arab states, he added, were the ones which were most reluctant to admit defeat and were making most noise.

The Ambassador said that the proposed internationalization of Jerusalem was both unjust and unworkable, but Israel had repeatedly indicated its desire to co-operate in internationalization of the Holy Places and to assure free and easy access to and from them.

The annual invitation exhibition "Painting in the United States, 1949," opened at Carnegie Institute, in Philadelphia, Pa., with a preview at which prizes and awards were announced. First prize of $1,500 this year went to the distinguished expressionist, Max Beckmann, one of the modern artists, who fell under Nazi displeasure and spent the war years in exile. He has been teaching in this country since his arrival and is on the staff of the Brooklyn Museum Art School. His canvas, called "Fisherwomen," is a characteristic work, if not his best—a somewhat involved figure composition whose people are modern daughters of Vikings—an uncompromising presentation with heavy black lines and almost harsh color areas.

MODEL OF TEMPLE IS ON EXHIBIT

A model of the Solomonic Temple and adjacent Palace buildings which stood on Mount Zion for more than 400 years until they were destroyed in 586 B.C.E., has been assembled and placed on permanent exhibit by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, at its Museum, 1109 Fifth Avenue, New York. Built by the late Joseph Doctorwicz, a teacher of Hebrew, who spent twelve years on its construction, the model is made of wood and plaster, and measures nine by twelve feet. In addition to following the architectural data furnished in the Bible, the model also follows the oral tradition of legends and stories preserved in rabbinic literature.

Elsewhere in the gallery are exact replicas of four fresco panels on Biblical themes—wall paintings excavated from the ancient synagogue of Dura Europos, Syria. These panels, which were executed by Professor Herbert J. Gute, are part of the only reproductions in existence of the three walls of the ancient synagogue excavated more than a decade ago.

Depicted in the paintings are "The Sacrifice of Isaac and the Messianic Temple," "Moses at the Well of Marah," "Return of the Ark from the Land of the Philistines," and "The Anointing of David by Samuel," the first two on loan from the art gallery of Yale University, and the remainder from the permanent collection of the Jewish Museum. The original synagogue and wall paintings are now assembled at Damascus, Syria.

Other examples of Jewish art work of antiquity on display with the model of Solomon's Temple are antique pottery, flasks, vases, glassware, lamps, candlesticks, and incantation bowls. This is augmented by an exhibit of Jewish tombstones dating back more than 2,000 years.

U.S.-Born Banker Boosts Israel

While shells were exploding on the streets of Tel Aviv during early days of the Arab-Israeli war, Lee Harris, American-born general manager of the Palestine Mortgage & Savings Bank, watched with amazement the students of Herzlia's College going through their gymnastic exercises in an open courtyard apparently oblivious to the danger.

Instructing the class was Miss Leah Jacobson, a sabra, or native Palestinian, and a member of Haganah, the Israeli Army. The two met, and seven months later were married.

In New York, Mr. and Mrs. Harris were interviewed in the offices of the Palestine Economic Corporation, 389½ Madison Avenue, the parent corporation of the Palestine Mortgage & Savings Bank. With both parents participating, the interview ranged from the economic opportunities and investment possibilities in Israel, to the Harris's baby girl, Alona, who was born in New York last August 19, one day after her mother arrived in the United States from Israel for a brief visit. The Harrises plan to return to Israel in November.

Mr. Harris, now thirty-four, was graduated from Yale in 1938, and from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in 1939. He served five years in the United States Navy, emerging with the rank of Lieutenant Commander. After serving on the executive staff of R. H. Macy for a time, he went to Israel in February, 1947, for the Palestine Economic Corporation.

In addition to his business activities, Mr. Harris converted part of his home into a service club for Americans, Canadians and others serving with the Israeli forces. He permitted these soldiers to use the bank as a mailing address, and aided in giving them moneys they received from their respective countries.

Discussing the economic aspects of Israel, Mr. Harris asserted that the country was an excellent place for American investments. New regulations, he said, make possible a return on invested capital as high as available anywhere, says the New York Herald Tribune. In addition, with an expanding population and with Israel aiming at becoming the industrial center for the Middle East, there is every possibility that there will soon be a substantial expansion of business.

While not minimizing the importance of gifts to Israel, he urged investments as a long-range method to help build up the country and to help provide jobs for the thousands of immigrants still pouring into the country. American economic assistance to Israel, he said, is directly in line with President Truman's plan for the development of underdeveloped areas.

In Search Of Noah's Ark

"These are the generations of Noah. Noah was in his generation a man righteous and whole-hearted; Noah walked with God." —Gen. 6:9

In the Torah section of the past Sabbath, there is described an event which took place in the dim gray dawn of history. This event was a world cataclysm which came near destroying the entire human race and all modes of animal life. It took the form of a vast inundation which covered the entire earth with water and whatever had the breath of life on land.

One family escaped the flood and that was the family of Noah which sought refuge in a three-storey rescue ship. In the Ark or ship, species of animals were also tucked away and these were provided with sufficient food during the entire flear period which, according to the story, lasted for a year and ten days. Thus, thanks to the ark, human and animal life on earth did not become extinct.

Did such an event really occur? We have, indeed, striking evidence that this Bible story event in history did occur about 3,600 B.C.E. One of the greatest of archaeologists of our day, L. Wooley, maintains that it is unscientific to deny the flood story. Of course, we are justified in asking for more evidence, but there is little doubt which way the evidence will trend.

Indeed, the story of Noah and the flood takes on contemporary significance. Who would ever believe that in this atomic age scientists would be climbing the Caucasus Mountains in search of Noah's Ark? Yet, press reports have it that such an expedition has ventured forth and the Soviets suspect this expedition of scientists, made up of British and American citizens, to be interested not in the Ark of Noah but rather on spying of the borders of the Soviet Union. Be it as it may, the search for Noah's Ark impresses us in being a futile one and with no significant purpose at hand.

There is no doubt that for the critical mind the Biblical story of Noah and the Ark presents many problems. How, for example, could two samples each of the infinite varieties of animal life of the world be tucked away in the Ark, no matter the large size of such a ship? How, too, could a Polar bear live within the Ark in company of animals that are used to dwell in equatorial climate? How could these live under identical conditions? Of course, there are those who try to reconcile the Bible story by saying that the inundation was not universal but local, and confined in one region which was then the composition, as far as the author knew, of the human race.

The best answer to the complexity of the story is to state at once that the Bible is not a scientific treatise. It does not deal with the problems of geography or geology. The story is of great ethical value. The deluge was the Divine judgment upon an age in which might was right and in which unscrupulous selfishness prevailed and in which power was deified.

In this age of corruption and sin one man alone was upright. The Rabbis indicate that Noah warned the people about him as to the coming of the deluge. He purposely took many years in the construction of the Ark so that he might attract the attention of the sinful population with the hope that he might with patience bring them to repentance. But in vain were his efforts.

The literatures of ancient times contain various versions of the flood story. The closest version to that of the Bible story is the Babylonian. Here, the personality resembling Noah is saved not because he is righteous but because he is a favourite of the gods. He happens to be clever, not righteous. The chief figure in the Babylonian story keeps as a secret the coming of the deluge. He is only interested in saving himself and not in the salvation and redemption of his fellowmen.

How sublime, therefore, from the ethical point of view is the Bible story of Noah which brings home to us the truth that the bases of human society are morality and justice. Is it not true that, due to the lack of these great ethical values, many a civilization in human history has come to an end?

One need only to turn the pages of human history and behold how civilizations have gone out of existence because man has failed to make justice dominant in life and has neglected the ways of righteousness. The inference from the Noah story of the Bible is the eternal truth that there exists a Power in this universe that will not permit wickedness and corruption to go too far and that this Power decrees doom upon humanity.

To sum up, we need not be concerned with harmonising the Noah story with science; we need not be concerned with finding Noah's Ark at this late date. What we must concern ourselves with is to recognize the chief ethical value of the Noah narrative.

We are living in a frightful age. There are those who believe that atomic power will destroy us unless we learn to ethically control this power for the benefit and the good of all human beings. Our own civilization is threatened and may suffer from a deluge of fire and be swept out of existence unless we quickly become possessed of spiritual power, a power which makes righteousness dominant in human life.

Indeed, not a new earth do we need but a spirit of righteousness. What blessings God has implanted in the world, if man only learned to harness these ethically!

In the story of Noah there is the hopeful sign of the rainbow with a promise of a better day. In the present world confusion there are many hopeful signs that our civilization will yet be rescued from destruction. An evidence of such encouragement is to be found in the fourth anniversary observance of the United Nations. What a rainbow of many colours does this world organization constitute, where a variety of nations and peoples of many creeds are seriously venturing to establish world security and world brotherhood!

Something of the sign of the rainbow amidst the clouds we ourselves experienced this past week in our own Montreal. We had the privilege of presiding at a meeting where representatives of Catholic and Protestant clerical and lay leaders came together in search of truth regarding the State of Israel's relation to the Christian world.

They came eagerly to listen to the facts as presented and reported by the Israeli Consul General to Canada, Mr. Avraham Harman. And how brilliantly did Mr. Harman outline the situation and in particular the Jewish attitude as to the place Jerusalem should come to occupy in Jewish life and the need for the internationalization of the Holy places both in Israeli and Arab territory!

Judging from the interest shown by those present and the number of letters which we received in gratitude for this gathering, we are, indeed, hopeful that better understanding is on the march and that the light of reason is still kept burning and that there are forces at work that will yet snatch our civilization from being inundated by fires of war and fright and hatred. Indeed, the future of civilization is rooted in righteousness, and in recognition of our duty to fellow-being.

to have succeeded in escaping and making their way to Israel."

The Government statement declared that the tortures were being carried out according to the "best known Nazi methods" and that victims included several young women.

"The Jews of Baghdad are stricken with fear," the statement continued. "They believe their entire community is at the brink of disaster. Fearing even grimmer reprisals, they have not dared to raise their voices in protest. The authorities have imposed a strict ban on all news of these happenings in the local press for fear of repercussions abroad."

The Israeli Government denounced the conduct of the Iraqi authorities as a "brazen example of racial hatred and evil persecution," as "wanton defiance of the rights of man" and as an "act liable to rekindle the flames of conflict in the Middle East in a period of armistice and at a time when increasing international efforts are being made to replace a state of strife by a stable, comprehensive peace."

"And all this is done at a time when the Government of Israel is doing its utmost to consolidate the position of the Arab minority in Israel," it added.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Frederick Keller Stamm, former pastor of the First Congregational Church of Chicago, and Rabbi Philip S. Bernstein, vice-president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, of Rochester.

Following the general meeting at 10 a.m. three institutes on brotherhood were held simultaneously in the town's three churches, the Salem Lutheran, Evangelical and Reformed and Evangelical United Brethren. Subjects discussed by panels of speakers in each church were "Techniques of Handling Prejudice and Prejudiced People"; "Religious Intolerance and American Society"; and "How to Assure Minority Groups Their Rights and Dignities as Americans."

Presented on a series of outdoor stages under a cloudless sky, the hour-long pageant, called "The Issue of an Ideal," was the most spectacular part of the program. Men, women, and children from all parts of Centre County, in which Aaronsburg is located, had roles in the performance. Most of them wore brilliant costumes of the periods of history with which the story dealt.

In a prologue, four episodes and an epilogue, the pageant traced the emergence of the American ideals of "justice, liberty of conscience, freedom to speak and right to assemble." The story seemed easily understood by the large audience while listening to the narration by Cornel Wilde, movie actor.

A symposium on "Brotherhood for Peace and Freedom" in the Salem Church concluded the program. Governor Duff presided. Others taking part included Sir Mohammed Aly Khan, vice-president of the U.N. General Assembly, and Dr. Channing H. Tobias, a director of the Phelps-Stokes Foundation.

less affairs concerning Jews were to be considered.

He said there had been no outward signs that the populace was rising against the Jews, although the Government had inaugurated Friday radio programs denouncing Jews for fleeing to Israel and inciting the people against them. The entire movement, he asserted, is Government-inspired.

He told of having watched four truckloads of Jews being transported from a police building to some unknown destination, with the occupants of the trucks screaming for help.

"We ran after them trying to determine where they are going but their hysteria had reached such a point that they were unintelligible," he said.

Thousands of Jewish settlers from Iraq demonstrated in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv against what they described as a "plot to disinherit and expel the oldest Jewish community in the world." They demanded government action to save the Jews of Iraq from the fate of the Jews in Germany and Europe.

In Tel Aviv, Benjamin Sassoon, president of the "Babylon Community," who headed a demonstration outside the Knesset (Parliament) Building, said the Jewish community of Iraq was older than the Iraqi Arabs. The Jews were exiled to Iraq — then Babylon — by Nebuchadnezzar after the destruction of the first temple in Jerusalem.

Mr. Sassoon estimated that Iraqi Jewish property was worth at least $500,000,000. He handed a memorandum to Behor Shitreet, Minister of Policy Affairs, who represents the Sephardic (Oriental) community in the Israeli Government. The memorandum appealed to the government to take every possible measure and make adequate preparations for compensation and re-establishment of the community in Israel. Mr. Shitreet promised the government action.

In Jerusalem thousands of Iraqi Jews demonstrated in Mahne Yehuda, Sephardic Jewish center, and heard addresses by community elders.

URGES CHURCH

The responsibility of the Christian churches to the Jews and means to combat anti-Semitism were discussed in New York at a conference on "The Church and the Jewish People in America."

Prof. Walter M. Morton, of Oberlin Theological Seminary, in Ohio, reviewed the efforts made last year by delegates at the Amsterdam Assembly of the World Council of Churches to understand the Christian responsibility and he also asked why the same problem that loomed so large among church officials "bulked so small in the minds of church-goers."

To carry out the resolution of the Amsterdam meeting, a great educational task must be performed, Professor Horton declared. He explained that anti-Semitism was not a Christian attitude.

A paper by the Rev. Harry L. Ellison of Mildmay Mission, London, contended that opposition to the Jewish religion by the Christian churches helped to create and foster anti-Semitism. The paper, read by Dr. J. Oscar Lee, of the race relations department of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, charged anti-Semitism to churches during the Nazi terror.

Mr. Ellison recommended that Sunday School teachers avoid prejudice in teaching the story of Jesus' crucifixion, and "should always try to show the other side by constantly reminding the children that almost all the heroes of the New Testament were Jews."

The plight of Jews who had been converted to Christianity aroused concern among the sixty persons at the conference. Professor Horton reminded them that these converts were persecuted by Jews and Christians and were left out of resolutions on refugees. Mr. Ellison explained that the convert brought with him "into his new surroundings all those wounds inflicted on his personality by anti-Semitism."

Dr. Conrad Hoffman Jr., executive secretary of the committee, mentioned the problem of mixed marriages and charged that the church and the Jews were equally opposed to them, although the mixed marriages that held through in Germany in spite of Nazi pressure were examples of ideal marriages.

Dr. E. Graham Wilson, former secretary of the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, presided at the conference, at 156 Fifth Avenue. The committee is sponsored by the Home Missions Council of North America and is composed of members from the Federal Council, the International Missionary Council and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

Must Import Too Much Of Food

Supply Minister Bernard Joseph told Israelis who had been eating less since his austerity program for economic recovery was launched six months ago that they would be able to loosen their belts a notch this month. They will get more beef and eggs.

This welcome news was attributable only in a small measure to an improvement in the general economic position and primarily to a more rational use of resources.

Israel still is spending $40,000,000 annually for imported food. The nation produces no sugar or oil seeds, only 10 per cent of grain requirements, 15 per cent of fodder, less than 5 per cent of cattle. Home production includes 40 per cent of milk, 42 per cent of fish, 40 per cent of potatoes and 90 per cent of vegetables.

The Minister said that for a country with no mineral wealth and subject to isolation in the event of war this was depressing. Mr. Joseph, who also holds the Agriculture portfolio, said a vast agricultural development program was planned for 1950. A shipment of $1,000,000 worth of tractors and combines, purchased with funds of an Export-Import Bank loan arrived in Israel recently and is being distributed. A large quantity of irrigation pipes also is on order.

A tiny baby spends most of his time asleep, but as we grow older we need less and less sleep to keep our bodies functioning normally. But there is a limit beyond which we cannot safely go. Every adult needs a good sleep every night and the man with his eye on the target of good health will take all he needs.

Gary Graffman won the Edgar M. Leventritt Foundation's tenth annual contest, and will be heard with the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, under Leonard Bernstein's direction, the night of February 25. The pianist, who celebrated his twenty-first birthday will eventually appear also with the Cleveland Orchestra and the Buffalo Philharmonic. Mr. Graffman was born in New York and studied with Isabelle Vengerova in Philadelphia at the Curtis Institute of Music, from which he was graduated in 1946. He made his New York debut at the age of twelve in Town Hall, and gave a Carnegie Hall recital as the winner of a special award in the Rachmaninoff Foundation's second piano contest. The Leventritt Award is made in memory of the late Edgar M. Leventritt, New York lawyer, amateur musician and patron of music. It offers the winner an appearance with the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra and, for the first time this year, appearances with the Buffalo and Cleveland orchestras.

The American Jewish Congress announced that, as a friend of the court, it had filed a brief in State Supreme Court at Kingston, N.Y., supporting the attack upon the constitutionality of the Feinberg law, which would require a loyalty test of teachers in the public schools. Specifically, the Congress contended that the law was unconstitutional because it abridged freedom of speech, press and assembly and the right to petition for redress of grievances, that it was a bill of attainder and ex post facto law, and that it deprived teachers of due process of law. The brief denounces both Communist and Fascist totalitarianism.

How to GIVE YOUR CHILD A BETTER START

Your little boy or girl has a long road to travel before meeting with the responsibilities of manhood or womanhood. Your own experience, however, will tell you how wonderfully helpful a Junior Estate Policy will be then. Until your child is 21, this policy includes a little life insurance and an emergency cash fund to use, if necessary, for education, wedding plans, or a start in business. Best of all, at age 21 the life insurance automatically increases to $5,000 without change in premiums. Imagine how helpful it will be to your son in manhood to have five or ten thousand dollars essential life insurance at childhood's premiums. And there are suitable options for girls.
